

CLIENT SPOTLIGHT

Linda | Haywood County, NC

On August 4, 2025, what began as an ordinary Monday quickly turned into a life-changing day for our client, Linda. That afternoon, she was delivering for DoorDash in Waynesville, North Carolina (Haywood County). After picking up an order, Linda entered an intersection on a green light when a large white truck ran a red light and T-boned her vehicle.

Linda's car was totaled, and she suffered five broken ribs. She was transported to the emergency room, where she received treatment for her injuries. The other driver was found to be completely at fault for causing the collision.

Within a week of the accident, Linda contacted King Law and began working with our Personal Injury Team. While the insurance company promptly resolved her property damage claim, it significantly undervalued her bodily injury claim. Despite the severity of her injuries, the insurance company attempted to use the fact that Linda had health insurance to minimize the value of her case.

During our investigation, we discovered that, in addition to running the red light, the at-fault driver was operating the vehicle without a valid driver's license and had an extensive history of traffic violations. We used this information during negotiations and ultimately secured the full amount of available insurance coverage for Linda's injuries.

Today, Linda has recovered from her injuries and has been compensated for her property damage, medical expenses, and pain and suffering. We're proud to have helped her navigate the claims process and achieve a positive outcome after such a difficult experience.

ASK THE PI TEAM

"Do I have a personal injury case?"

Every case is different, but a few key questions can help determine if you may have a claim:

- Was someone else's negligence responsible for the accident?
- Is there evidence of what happened, such as a police or incident report?
- Were you injured as a result?

If you answered "yes" to these questions—or you're simply unsure—it's worth speaking with a personal injury attorney. A consultation can help you understand your rights and whether you may have a case.
